Idaho State Bar Honors Moscow Attorney Mark Monson

BOISE – The Idaho State Bar has honored Mark T. Monson, a partner at Mosman law Offices in Moscow with the Service Award for his work advancing the profession, especially through the Professional Conduct Board. That body reviews complaints against attorneys and may recommend discipline against those who have broken the Idaho Rules of Professional Conduct.

He has also served on the City of Moscow Board of Adjustment for the last seven years and is extensively active with his church.

“I have always felt like community service is important, and that principle has been underscored as I’ve watched busy people contribute time and resources to community service projects and events,” he said.

“I enjoy working with people that I would otherwise not meet except for being involved in community activities.”

He explained about the benefits of public service.

“I have learned that even though I maintain a busy schedule with work, family, church, etc., there is always time to contribute to the community. In addition, I’ve learned that people really do appreciate the time and efforts that are given on their behalf from volunteers.”
